WASHINGTON, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1905.

Railway Employees Came Merely as Individuals

Delegation That Called Upon the President to Protest Against Rate Regulation Was Not Sent Officially by Organizations.

Not one of the twenty-one railway employees who called on the President to express opposition to Government regulation of railway rates represented his organization in any formal way. Not one had been selected by lodge, division, or council. Not one represented anybody except himself.

This is admitted by members of the delegation who were called on at their headquarters at the Riggs Hotel, where they occupy a series of rooms on two floors.

George W. Huntley, of the Order of Railway Conductors, a conductor from the Lake Shore road, according to the list which has been given out, was asked: "Just as individuals."

"Do you gentlemen represent the various organizations of which you are members, in any delegated capacity?"

"We represent the sentiment of railroad employees of the entire country," replied Mr. Huntley.

"But are you the officers of the organizations of which you belong?"

"No, we are not."

"Do you come here as the chosen delegates or accredited representatives of those organizations?"

"No, we do not."

You represent them, in fact, so far as authority is concerned, simply your own personal opinions."

"That is true, so far as delegated authority is concerned," Mr. Huntley proceeded to argue that the organizations of which they are members are in some cases on record, through the statements of their officers, as opposed to any reduction of rates that will affect the revenues and wages; and that the Order of Railway Conductors in convention at Portland in May last took strong ground against such a policy.

At the time the call upon the President was made it was understood, by supposition, at least, that the callers stood in a representative capacity of some sort, for the organizations of which they are members.

In the prepared literature, which they gave out quite profusely, was a list of their names, each followed by the name of the organization represented, in such fashion as to lead to the belief that the delegation was an official one.

Not only this, but it is further pointed out that the head of the delegation was "W. M. Clark, Order of Railway Conductors." The name of Chairman Clark, it is alleged, was by many people confounded with that of E. E. Clark, grand chief conductor of the Order of Railway Conductors, which, it is claimed, tended to give the delegation an even more decided suggestion of official character.

Switchmen With President.

Concerning the attitudes of the organization of employees, of which the railroad men now in the city are members, it is stated that the firemen and switchmen have never passed resolutions indicating any attitude on the rate regulation question.

The Switchmen's Union, the organ of the body, has repeatedly taken the strongest editorial ground in favor of the President's position on the rate question, and the President is himself an honorary member of the firemen's union.

A moderate resolution on the rate regulation issue was passed by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen at their Buffalo convention last spring, and the grand master was given discretion as to whether it should be promulgated or used in any effort to influence public opinion. It is stated that the resolution has never been used in this way.

Chiefs Took No Stand.

Only a few days before this present delegation of railroad men came to town, the responsible executive officers of the great organizations of railroad employees were here to attend hearings on safety appliance regulations. At that time it was rumored that they would consider the question of opposing the Presidential program; but no announcement of such course was made.

There were present at that time E. E. Clark, grand head of the Order of Railway Conductors; John Hannehan, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen; W. S. Stinson, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; P. H. Morrissey, head of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and Hugh A. Fuller, legislative representative for a number of years of the joint interests of all these organizations. At the same time F. T. Hawley, of the switchmen's organization, was in the city, and it was said of good authority that he assured the President of his support. It has been intimated broadly that the delegation now in the city is here at the expense of some interest other than either their organizations' or their individual concern in the matter, and, of course, the suggestion has been that which obtained at the Interstate Commerce law convention at Chicago, where it was said the opponents of the regular convention were brought in by the railroad interests.

The sophomore class of the Georgetown Medical College held its election of officers Wednesday, and after a spirited and close election, Mr. McLaughlin, of Pittsburgh, was elected president. Matthew Sweeney, of Boston, easily defeated his rival in the contest for vice president. Thomas J. Cleary, of Brooklyn, was elected secretary, and Carl E. Van Emmon, for treasurer, were both unanimously chosen for their respective offices.

After a short talk to the class by Mr. Neil, the retiring president, the meeting was brought to a close. Mr. Neil refused the re-nomination.

HALLS OF THE ANCIENTS WILL GO UNDER HAMMER

Property Ready for Auctioneer and Will Be Placed on Sale This Afternoon.

As a result of the failure of the original owners to pay the interest and back taxes, the property of the Halls of the Ancients will be sold over the head of the auctioneer, Franklin Webster Smith, at public auction this afternoon.

It was the plan of Mr. Smith to give the Halls to the city for a public museum if he could have held them until the opening of Congress, when the bills necessary for their acceptance would have been introduced.

At 10 o'clock this morning Thomas J. Owen & Son, the auctioneers in charge of the sale, said that they had not received any notice to stop the sale, and that it would occur at 4:30 this evening. The red flag is flying in front of the property today.

Mr. Smith has two years and a half of an unexpired lease on the property, but if the sale is consummated this evening he can hold possession no longer than December 1.

Until that time he will open the halls to the public and speak three times daily in an effort to show the citizens of Washington what has been taken from him. Mr. Smith claims that there has been a conspiracy on the part of several of the real estate dealers of this city to get possession of the property for the theater syndicate.

James Reeder has commenced proceedings for divorce against Isabelle Reeder on statutory grounds. He also alleges that his wife deserted him. A co-respondent is named in the proceedings.

According to the statement of Mr. Reeder, (he married the defendant in 1888. W. Preston Williamson is counsel for the complainant.)
